

Oh, one the Hot-ten lot eating the Li-on on the Tail! What does it all mean? Ah, let the Surface, it is nothing more or less than Wire-less Telegraphy in the Jungle. When he hits the Tail gently the Li-on yells. When he hits it a hard Soak the Li-on bel-lows might-ily. A gentle one is a dot and a hard one is a dash. Another Hot-ten-tot in the dis-tance hears the sound and soaks his Li-on, and thus the mes-sage is car-ried from Li-on to Li-on a-cross the coun-try. Ah, Bu-fus, Science is a great Stunt!

SPECIAL SURGERY IN BEAUTY'S GAUZE

How the Bloom of Youth Is Restored and Good Looks Made to Order

REPORT to surgical means of securing the greatest beauty possible has become so common nowadays at the medical profession has been led to recognize this special branch of surgery, and has finally attempted it with partial success.

The naturally plain woman may have crooked nose straightened, prominent ears set back, and even a homely mouth may be reshaped by clever use of the scalpel and needle. The woman whose eyes are set in depths has brought her eyes under the eye, or wrinkles on her cheeks, may have them eliminated permanently and painlessly. The grade nose whose nose is losing its graceful and tender rolls of fat may recover the old lines, and the ordinarily good-looking girl who is not satisfied with her bright charms can acquire cunning displeases.

All these operations are comparatively easy to surgery, which has until within a few years been regarded as curative rather than decorative. But work in the domain of surgery for the surgeon as a provider of beauty that a school of the art as science. Folds and wrinkles frequently develop prematurely about the eyes of individuals, after years in the appearance. Bagging of the skin beneath the eyes not only adds somewhat to the ap-

"A hypodermic syringe, a bone scalpel, small, sharp scissors, fine needle and fine sterile silk represent the instruments absolutely necessary for the operations.

"Cleanliness is essential to prompt and satisfactory healing. The face of the patient and the hands of the operator should be scrubbed. Antiseptic may be used, though they are not essential.

"These operations are painlessly performed after the tissues have been infiltrated with a weak cocaine solution. By painlessly it does not mean that the patient is hanging on to the table with both hands and praying for the early conclusion of the ordeal.

The most nervous woman will quietly admit, during the operation, that she is suffering from no pain whatever.

"The needle of the syringe is coated into the skin, and a drop or two of the cocaine solution deposited. The needle point is now pushed further into the tissues, and more fluid deposited.

"At the point of insertion of the needle sufficient solution should be deposited to cause a pallor of the skin. This will insure a painless reformation of the needle.

"Wrinkles, folds and bags beneath the tracted from the age of the patient, and the woman of fifty has become a girl of twenty.

She perhaps the double chin, so fatal to beauty, has drawn the face down until there are deep lines about the mouth. Then there is a simple little operation which is performed in less than fifteen minutes, while the patient chats with the doctor, and behold! the mouth smiles and the double chin is no more.

Does the lady want a dimple? Just a touch of the bone scalpel, a bit of court plaster, and in a week it is accomplished. Is the nose shaped like a duck's bill? Careful liposuction of paraffin fill it out to a line of classic beauty that the Oracle might envy. Or if a too strongly Roman forehead exists, the skilful quarter deftly opens the skin, grinds off the offending hump and produces a nasal organ to be a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

Paraffin is also injected to round out thin upper arms and make them more presentable for the wear of evening dress, and experts claim they have injected as much as twenty pounds of this substance into one human body without the least apparent injury or discomfort. It seems to be the only medium known to science which is assimilable into the human body to such an extent by injection.

So the plainer of women, if the desire, may have her face and form remodelled until she is positively charming.

pearance of age for reveals sensitive people, so that unfortunately so efficient remedy is often called for. It can be obtained.

"These conditions may be easily overcome by simple surgical procedures which are performed painlessly with the aid of anesthetic anesthesia," says Dr. Charles C. Miller, in the Medical Brief. "Preparations for these operations are simple. Any physician may equip his office so that he can do this work satisfactorily, and the medical calls only for ordinary surgical dexterity.

eyes are eradicated by the removal of a crescent of skin beneath the eye. The convexity of the crescent should be downward, and the concavity of the crescent should be down to the bridge of the nose. The width of the crescent varies according to the depth of the wrinkles or the size of folds or bags.

"The first incision should be made with a sharp scalpel along the lid. The skin should be divided entirely, and loosened somewhat. It should then be drawn upward, the operator observing carefully just how much must be removed to entirely overcome the condition necessitating the operation; then, with the scissors, the skin is cut away so that the crescent is made complete.

Here are some of the other marvels which the woman with plenty of money and the ambition to become a beauty may easily have performed:

The wrinkled woman of fifty whose carriage is still good may show as if she had found the fountain of perennial youth. If she will submit to have her face "tucked" here and there little folds are gathered up and small bits are crescised out with the sharpest of instruments.

In a few days the skin heals, and not a scar remains to betray the work of the specialist. Then a short course of massage and the flesh appears as firm as that of a young girl.

Finally just a touch of color is delicately tattooed on the cheeks, and grown thirty years have apparently been subtracted from the age of the patient, and the woman of fifty has become a girl of twenty.

So the plainer of women, if the desire, may have her face and form remodelled until she is positively charming.

"Polly Pink," said Saucy Sissy, "I was naughty yesterday, I acted like a silly little child; But to-day I will do better, and I mean just what I say, For I want to be both mannerly and mild."

"I am going to a meeting of some grown-up ladies wise, And I want to act as proper as the rest; I shall be sedate and solemn, I sha'n't even wink my eyes, And of all the ladies I'll behave the best."

3

Full of highest resolution, Saucy Sissy dressed with care, And tried her best to look like Polly Pink; She pinned her collar neatly, and tied back her flying hair, And said, "There! now I'll do very well, I think."

"Good-by, dear Polly Pink, my mind is set on noble work, I feel most awful cultured and refined!" But the busy little dimple in her cheek began to lurk, And mischief brewed in Saucy Sissy's mind.

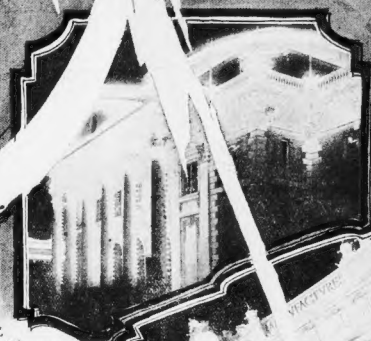

At the meeting earnest ladies read their papers wise and deep, On "Why the Universe is a Mistake." 5 Saucy Sissy gravely listened, till she nearly fell asleep, And had to bite her tongue to keep awake.

Suddenly she gave a spring, and reached the mantel with a bound, Which caused a lot of bric-a-brac to fall; 6 "I'll sit up here," said Sissy, "while that mouse is running round!" (Although she hadn't seen a mouse at all.)

GROWING SUCCESS of the JAMESTOWN EXPOSITION

BEAUTIFUL NIGHTLY
ELECTRIC ILLUMINATION OF THE JAMESTOWN EXPOSITION.

The most beautiful feature of the Exposition is its nightly illumination by electricity, which transforms the grounds into a perfect fairyland. No less than a quarter of a million electric lamps shed their light over buildings and grounds. Architectural lines are traced by miles and miles of lights, giving a new and unearthly beauty to the solid realities of the daytime.

Raleigh Court, the magnificent court of honor of the Exposition, is the centre of the illumination. Within it is a great electric fountain which changes its colors every moment with unending variety. Out into Hampton Roads stretches the great Government pier, its arch, towers, cordons and pylons outlined by electric lights. Opposite the pier is the domed Auditorium, from which five great searchlights project paths of light into the heavens.

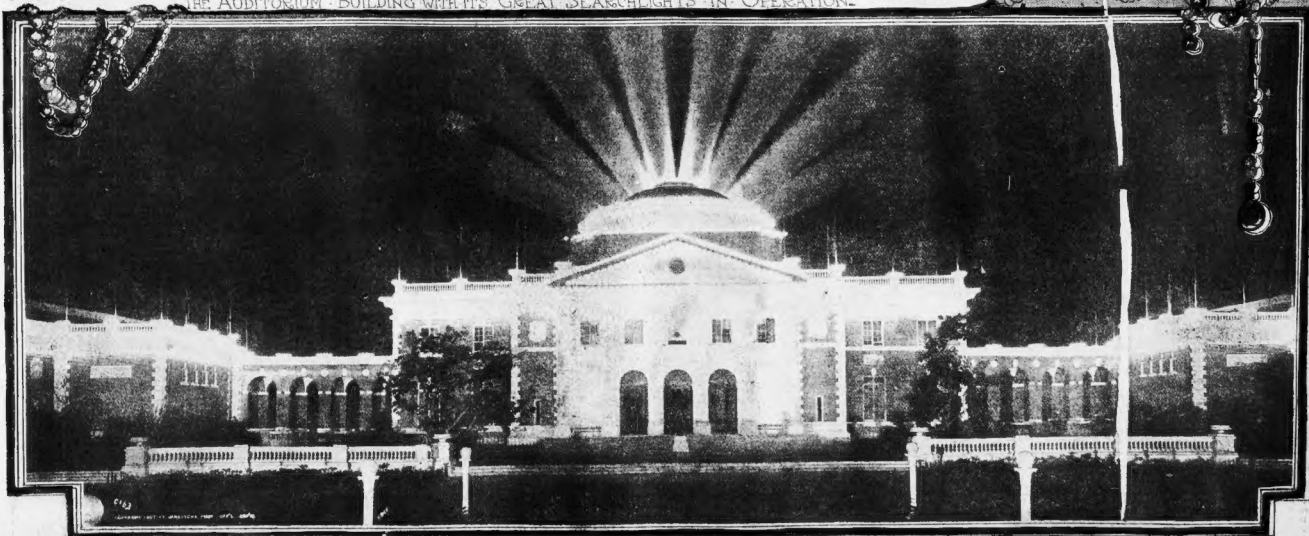

The buildings upon the War Path are all ablaze with myriad lights, and last but not least is the Filleton Walk, liberally supplied with trees and arbors, where the lamps are placed at irregular intervals.

Altogether the electrically illuminated water front includes a space twelve hundred and fifty feet in length by six hundred feet in width.

THE Jamestown Exposition, which is now finally completed, is proving itself a great success and is well worth a visit by everybody. A particularly enjoyable way of visiting it is to travel from Washington down the Potomac River by one of the Norfolk and Washington steamboats, which pass Mount Vernon and other historic points of interest on the banks of the river, run through Hampton Roads, where the Monitor and the Merrimac fought their decisive battle, and finally land the passengers at the Exposition grounds.

THE RED-HAIRED WOMAN IS A Storm Centre

"She Goes to Extremes";

She Is Called a Flirt."

woman a saint, who loves our presence. She is even more primitive than other women, and all women are primitive. She has many faults, though I search for her that even those faults are big generous ones. And she has this virtue, that she is never stupid. She is bright and keen. The faculty which I hope I possess of seeing things straight is in a large part, I believe, because I am a red-haired woman. That, at all the poor red-haired woman's true creature of extremes! She swings constantly from heaven to hell and back from hell to heaven. She oscillates between laughter and sob. Because she is more vivid than other women, her joys and sorrows are deeper and more stirring. The red-haired woman is either radically happy or profoundly miserable. The middle ground is unknown to her creature. She is always found at the extremes. She is big hearted and her affections are strong, but they are not held about it. Your Major Claude E. Woodruff who said, "Infusions of the hair is a guide or form of instability, is quite right." I never will him. The red-haired woman is unstable because her affections are intense. She is an idealist, and when she discovers that the god of her worship is only a poor male creature after all she will, for life him. She makes successive experiments in idealism and as such experiments are always failures she earns the title of Flirt. Flirts, you know, are only idealists in operation.

But I disagree with your American Major who said, "Infusions of the hair is a guide or form of instability, is quite right." I never will him. The red-haired woman is unstable because her affections are intense. She is an idealist, and when she discovers that the god of her worship is only a poor male creature after all she will, for life him. She makes successive experiments in idealism and as such experiments are always failures she earns the title of Flirt. Flirts, you know, are only idealists in operation.

"She is an idealist and when she discovers that the god of her worship is only a poor male creature after all she will, she flirts him."

WHEN Mrs. Clayton Glyn, the wife of a wealthy English squire, and herself notable as the author of those clever novels of English court life, "Visa of Elizabeth," "The Viscountess of Evesham," and "Three Weeks," walked down the grand planks of the Cedric to make her first visit to New York, a smaller woman in a gray suit, and with hair as vividly red as the famous Englishwoman's, followed her and carried her bags. "This is my maid," she said. "I always have a red-haired maid because she will understand me." Mrs. Glyn, who is visiting America to gather material for future works, believes that the red-haired woman is an unhappy and misunderstood person. To this newspaper she has given her criticism and the opinion of the woman upon whom she is an authority, her own hair being as red as it is possible for hair to be.

"I can only see red hair, and that gives you a general look of the Devil," replies the Duke.
who says, "Fiery red hair is even in the male, rarely among the leaders." Red-haired persons are very odd. They have the qualities of leadership except—Well, it is true that instability does militate against prolonged or successful leadership, perhaps. Well, he may be half right.
"Chapters was red-haired. The illustration is pointing that red-haired women are ever storm centres. Restless themselves, they create an atmosphere of restlessness in those about them. As the red-haired women are unhappy themselves, those who love them are sure to be unhappy. Mary Queen of Scots changed the color of her hair often, but it was normally red. What an instance of the human story period was that poor, unhappy queen! And Elizabeth of England was red-haired, and Elizabeth of England, we all know, was unhappy.
The red-haired woman is not however, she can do more help if then she can help her hair being red. She is impulsive, and her impulses make for herself and her friends all manner of trouble.
The girl who looks for herself and her friends all manner of trouble. The girl who looks for herself and her friends all manner of trouble. The girl who looks for herself and her friends all manner of trouble.

red man—leader of gent's boys. But I beautiful, but if she is not—if she have would not be so unjust as to stamp you with these qualities because of that."
Which is after all the argument for the woman with the red hair. Whatever the prejudice against her because of her fiery traits she should not be judged by that.
Red-haired women are all sensitive and they suffer. They are as much at the mercy of their moods as a middle-class is the victim of the age. Yet I like to have them about me. I always have a red-haired maid, because she understands me.
The same atmospheric conditions that make me moody make her so. If I am cross she knows why I am cross, and also encourages me. If my hair becomes curly and sticks to the brush, and refuses to be pliant and respectable, she never loses patience, because her own hair has been untractable and has stuck to the brush.
The red-haired woman is the most unstable of her sex. The only certain thing about her is that she will do the unexpected. I have heard of that inconsiderate lady, she has never explained it. No one can explain it. Probably she can't explain it to herself. The only explanation is that she is a woman with red hair. And to be of the red-haired sort, that is sufficient.
I have said that the red-haired woman is unhappy. That is not only because she has vivid sensations, but because she is never satisfied. The auburn-haired woman is always extremely this or exceedingly that.
The red-haired woman is the only happy woman. No one who is ambitious can ever be happy, for it is weighed down by the burden of her own is burdened with the sorrows of the world.
But the red-haired woman has a compensation for her unhappiness. She is often

Who Dyed the Dog?

OR---How the Feminine Worshippers of Doggies Have Gone to Extremes of Law Over a Teeny-Tiny Doggie, and There is a Libel Suit in Which $10,000 for Each Pound of the Five Pound Dog is Involved, to Settle the Vexatious Question---if the Dog Was Dyed, Who Did it?

"An accident has befallen my poor little Chin!" she wailed. "Who has done this cruel thing?"

PRINCESS DE MONTIGNY

Chin Chin, the Dyed Chow-Chow.

WHO has dyed red the coat of poor Chin Chin?

Chin Chin is a thoroughbred and a prize winner at many dog shows. At least he was a prize winner, and he had been retained a thoroughbred. But the glory of his ancestry has been tarnished by gossip and the red point.

He is one of the finest Chow Chows in the world, with more of the points of a well-bred and well-brought-up Chinese dog than any other of his breed in this country. He is a mere pretender, with no more right to the red and white of his coat than an old woman to the red and white of her manufactured complexion? Is he prince or pauper?

The question is an ancient one. All the dog fanciers and canine experts in this country are perplexed by it. Two fashionable women have repeatedly offered bounties in trying to settle it. And although Chin Chin is a very small dog, weighing scarcely five pounds, he has been the cause of a riot and a which $10,000, or $10,000 for each pound, is involved.

Was the rich red of his coat natural or was it touched up? And if touched up, who perpetrated the crime in chief?

Chin Chin lives, and Chin Chin can't talk. As a rule, he never does, and a former friend of his who does not--but the Princess Montigny would like to possess him--at least to his point and shining eyes and tongue tipped with gold.

Let us introduce Chin Chin. He is small and rascally, with ears that stick straight up and tail that wags vigorously, and eyes not bright and keen as they are those of his neighbors at the dog show, but sleepy and contemplative, as are those of his two largest companions, who, as he did, from the far city of Peking, his nature is sluggish--his admirers say philosophic. At any rate, he prides himself on exercising and eating to having become of this peculiar disposition his owner, the Princess Montigny, has a strange, colorful life of his coat was perpetuated.

"A bull terrier would have seized the cowardly hand and never let it go," declares the Princess. "A fox terrier would have nipped and snarled, and the shrewd Chin Chin would have brought help. But poor Chin Chin is a philosopher, a pacifist. He submits to what he thinks is the best taste."

Mrs. Ada Olive Van Huesen shares her admirer, smiles heartily, the Princess Montigny, and replies:

"Even Chin Chin would have been a new, any stranger had approached him."

The Princess and Threes of Her Dogs.

"There's the wonderful Chow-Chow. What a beautiful coat! Even the groom had to save his sensibilities!"

which has been turned face downward upon her back. A year ago the two were inseparable. They had the common interest of being women of fashion. Also they were both owners of five kennels. Because of this community of interest it was assumed that they would work together harmoniously. The Princess Montigny was chosen president of the Ladies' Kennel Club and her dear friend, Mrs. Ada Olive Van Huesen, was elected vice-president. And the friends did work together in harmony and their friendship increased until the small dog, Chin Chin, intervened.

Who colored Chin Chin's coat? It was their difference of opinion about this exercise in painting that brought about the riot, the claim for $10,000 damages, and the surrender of a friendship.

It happened at Boston, at an exhibition of the New England Kennel Club. Chin Chin arrived in a carriage, attended by a groom, as the sunbeams fell streaming upon it. Women who were leading all the fiercest and jauntiest Pomeranians to their kennels stilled signs of envy. "Chin Chin was just from the viewpoint of the dog fancier--beautiful. And such a gleaming red coat!" They had never seen such rich redness before. It was extraordinary. "Chin Chin's reception was an event. Visitors in the exhibition stood in crowds about the little dog with the rich rufous coat. The Princess presided at the impromptu reception. The groom stood about, and when ever it was necessary to lift Chin Chin about he did so with gloves that beautifully matched the Chow Chow.

Yet the evening of the last day that Boston paid court to China, when Chin Chin was left alone, Chin Chin a dread, full thing happened. The Princess Montigny and the groom chanced to be absent at the same time, when Chin Chin was left alone. When the Princess returned a half a dozen white handkerchiefs were strewn about in his kennel. And even handkerchiefs were stained red, precisely the shade of red of the Chow Chow's rufous, beautiful, extraordinary coat. At sight of these handkerchiefs the Princess, who is a relative of King Leopold and possesses 700 of his temperaments, burst into tears.

Matters and matters crowded about the wailing Princess, and the contemplative dog, Chin Chin, sat upon his haunches and gazed placidly into space. Whatever the injury that had befallen him, he seemed unconscious of it.

A woman in green velvet princess gown, with silver fox fur and a hat heavy with a weight of plumes, ran forward. It was Mrs. Ada Olive Van Huesen. She came confidentially to the president of the Ladies' Kennel Club while she searched for him and set out one of the handkerchiefs that she was carrying with a frown of reprobation. She turned a cold gaze upon her friend.

Mrs. A. O. VAN HUSEN

"She lay on a sofa in the darkened room of her hotel, suffering from her fifth attack of hysteria."

"Do not be alarmed!" Her tones were low. "It is not blood, but tears!"

When Mrs. Princess Montigny went the more. "Who could have done such a dreadful thing?" she cried again and again, and in a few minutes she was conscious that to her was making reply--that she was addressing her inquiries to Chin Chin who answered nothing at all, but gazed steadily away, and to the groom, who was at the distant group of women, who were clearly discussing the "accident" that had befallen Chin Chin, though they evidently looked away.

When the avails were made Chin Chin was not even mentioned. His address was in the Valley of Humiliation and the mount of Ironpound, or, more literally, she lay on a sofa in the darkened room of her hotel suffering from her fifth attack of hysteria since the day on which it occurred.

her denunciations of the "creature who dyed the dog?"

When the Princess had so far recovered from her indignation as to talk placidly, she said: "It was quite unnecessary that Chin Chin's coat should be dyed. He was many times a prize winner before this Boston show, and the idea of coloring a dog who is to be handled by judges is a thing that would hardly occur to a practical exhibitor. I did not depend for success on the true show of the best show, and did not give him any attention. He was formerly absent and on a bench quite apart and out of the sight of the critics, which demanded a great deal of my attention."

There is no doubt that coloring matter was put on the coat of this dog. When I was in the darkened room of my hotel and by whom it was put there I do not know, but I had previously announced my dramatic tale he could tell.

"A sort of tree-trunk hewn in the roughest manner by a woodman with an axe, surmounted by a hideously swollen tadpole head on a goltred neck."

In his earlier work, it will be remembered, Dr. Nordau traced the existence of various forms of mental degeneration among authors, poets, artists, statesmen, philosophers and men of intellectual eminence in many avocations. The world was greatly startled by Dr. Nordau's ingenious and scientific explanation that those whom they had regarded as men of genius were really a lot of lunatics, whose brains were leoparded, too hard or too soft, too big or too small, too fast or too slow, or in some way different from the sane and normal.

Rodin, the great Rodin, creator of "The Thinker," of the statues of Balzac and Victor Hugo, and many other works, the most famous sculptor of the day, who has been received in special audience by King Edward and praised everywhere as the most original sculptor of our time, is denounced by Nordau as the greatest of all artistic degenerates.

The production which first brought him the custom of the decads is a composition which was devised for the gate of Dante's Inferno. He had worked at it for decades. After a few fragments, which were to be seen in 1859, in the Universal Exhibition at Paris, he showed the whole. It is a plaster model at his private exhibition of 1900. It is inspired undoubtedly by Ghiberti's door of the Baptistry at Florence, but stands in intentional contrast to it. The great Quattrocentist depicts life in Paradise; Rodin's intention is to show existence in life.

"Rodin's 'State of Hell' exhibits rows of naked women in all the situations and occupations of the Witches' Sabbath, when it is most devilish. Myia of hysteria shake and twist these bodies, every motion of which betrays shocking aberration and degeneracy. These patients of the Salpêtrière, the Atlas of Pictures edited in this clique (iconoclasts) in the Exposition evidently served him for models. And from him, he it incidentally observed, the American Alinari's appears to have drawn his inspiration with the aggravating circumstance that he clothes Rodin's naked women in rich modern toilettes, and by this artful means makes them even more objectionable."

Concerning Rodin's most famous portrait statue Dr. Nordau writes:

"Rodin has represented Haliczak as jumping out of bed in the morning; he wraps himself, unclothed, in his monk-like dressing gown, without even putting his arms in the sleeves, irrationally impelled to hurry to his writing table in order to fix the thoughts of which his creative brain is his portraits."

Alexander, is stamped by Mr. Norton as a spectacular degenerate. "He was the inventor of arabesque portraiture. His women lie down to agonistic contortions on a ground or on sofas, with their eyes up and heads hanging down, as if with their necks twisted round like a screw, or as if they were like a sleeping dog asleep." The inoffensive spectator Alexander became a first-class "iron, and the critics of criticism did not fail to praise his special knowledge of, and feeling for, the "lone women of high-strung nerves and satanic caprices."

A TRIP TO MARS

OH, by and by we shall hear the cry:
"This is the way to Mars;
Come take a trip on the morning ship.
It sails by the Isle of Stars.

"A GLORIOUS view of planets new
We promise by night and day;
Past dying suns our good ship runs,
And we pause at the Milky Way."

I AM almost sure we will take that tour
Together, my dear, my dear;
For ever have we, by land and sea,
Gone journeying far and near.

OUT over the deeps, up mountain steeps,
We have traveled mile on mile;
And to sail away to the Martian Bay—
Oh, that were a trip worth while!

OUR ship will race thro' seas of space
Up into the Realm of Light,
Till the whirling ball of the Earth grows small,
And is utterly lost to sight.

THRO' the nebulous spawn where planets are born
We will pass with sails well furled,
And with eager eyes we will scan the skies,
For the sight of a new-made world.

FROM the derelict barque of a sun gone dark,
Adrift in our fair ship's path,
A beacon star shall guide us afar
And afar from the Comet's wrath.

O H, many a start of pulse and heart,
We have felt at the sight of land;
But what would we do if the dream came true
And we sighted the Martian strand?

SO, if some day you come and say,
 "They are sailing to Mars, I hear,"
 I want you to know I am ready to go—
 All ready, my dear, my dear.

PHYSICIANS—The mole. Quite natural
 MARY—And that's the way.
 MRS. GLAHAM—But the tor, he is suffering so terribly. Listen to how he groans.
 PHYSICIANS—Poor little, then.
 MRS. GLAHAM—Oh, I forgot. It is a hour past his supper time.
 MARY—Wow, too long ago.
 MR. GLAHAM (sighing the perspiration out of his forehead)—And, you don't think there's any softening of the brain?
 PHYSICIANS—Oh, yes, there's a ha-casy on parents in the house, but it isn't the baby who has got it.

MATCH PLAY COST
LITTLE GIRL LIFE

Antonia from her father's side, of No.
10 Irving Street, said she had called on her father the back yard where he started to play with some boys. She saw some boys wanted and they left. She went to the house, but by the time she got there she had passed on. She was alone. She was seen at the house from about 10 foot away. She was seen by Fred E.
and a man who was dead.

Swamped with Answers to Inverted Word Problem.

190 ALLOTMENTS MADE

New Problem for Stamp Collectors in To-day's Issue;
Send in Your Answer.

HERE is the list of Trading Stamp winners. All over New England women and men, too, studied out the favored word problem in last Sunday's American and fairly swamped No. 80 Sumner street with their answers.

It took days to sort out the vast mail bag full of replies and select the winners of the 25,000 stamps.

As a result of the labor of clerks employed to do the sorting, one hundred and ninety allotments of Trading Stamps, from 1,000 down to 50, have been made.

So much has such interest in any stamp contest been shown in New England that it was apparent that the women of each State are competitors of their sisters in other States.

There is still another opportunity in this contest for the women of New England to show their skill in solving the word problem in the inverted word

"LITTLE SAID SOONER MENDED"

Here Is the Familiar Quotation Which Is the Basis for the Great Contest for Trading Stamps as Prizes Offered in To-day's American.

The BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN today offers as prizes to its clever readers the second allotment of 25,000 TRADING STAMPS which are to be given away free by the Sunday American—25,000 STAMPS, an equivalent of $25,000 in store purchases. To win a prize at this contest you have to do in to find the words among the want ads, that for the first time in history, "Little Said Sooner Mended." The words are inverted and scattered through the WANT ADS. The inverted word "A" will be all found on one page.

If you find these ads, you can easily find the words, as they will all be upside down. Make a list of the ads containing the inverted words and send it to the Trading Stamp Prize Department at this office. Among the 190 people sending the best lists from today's paper we will distribute 25,000 stamps, equivalent in store purchases of $25,000. Use the following coupon in sending in your answer.

Write the name of the advertisement in which you find the inverted word in the column headed Advertisement and the classification under which it is printed, headed Class.

Write your name, address and stamps preferred on the lines below, and send to Trading Stamp Department, Boston American.

TEXTILE WORKERS TO TIE UP MILLS IF WOMAN ISN'T TAKEN BACK

Union Members in Solid Ranks Back Mrs. Tuttle in Pawtucket Fight.

CHARGE DISCRIMINATION

Make Issue of Discharge of President of Carders' Union.

4,000 ARE READY TO GO OUT

Coates, Head of Big Thread Factory, Gives No Satisfaction to Committee.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Oct. 19.

Thousands of textile operatives from the Canada line to the Delaware Cape, and from the Bay State coast to the Pennsylvania coal fields, stand like a solid rock behind Mrs. Thomas E. Tuttle, president of the Carders' Union of this city, in her fight for reinstatement in her position at the plant of the J. & P. Coats Thread Company, Ltd., which is an English corporation, wherein she is ranked by the United Textile Workers of America.

After a conference of thirty-five years in the city, which was held on Saturday night, the union members of the J. & P. Coats Thread Company, Ltd., voted to support Mrs. Tuttle in her fight for reinstatement. The union members of the J. & P. Coats Thread Company, Ltd., voted to support Mrs. Tuttle in her fight for reinstatement.

Discrimination, Says Golden.

"The woman's dismissal was a direct result of discrimination," said Mr. J. H. Golden, president of the J. & P. Coats Thread Company, Ltd., "and it is the duty of the union to support her in her fight for reinstatement. The union members of the J. & P. Coats Thread Company, Ltd., voted to support Mrs. Tuttle in her fight for reinstatement."

Merchants Fear Strike

With the prospect of a general strike in the city, merchants are feeling uneasy. The union members of the J. & P. Coats Thread Company, Ltd., voted to support Mrs. Tuttle in her fight for reinstatement."

Much at Stake in Issue.

"There will be taken to secure Mrs. Tuttle's reinstatement," said Mr. J. H. Golden, president of the J. & P. Coats Thread Company, Ltd., "and it is the duty of the union to support her in her fight for reinstatement."

INCREASE IN COURT CASES, BIG DECREASE IN CRIME

Roxbury Has Busiest District Court in New England, Barring Boston's.

Though there were nearly 1,000 more cases brought before the Roxbury District Court this year than during the corresponding period of 1906, the report of the clerk, Mr. J. O'Connell, shows that the number of crimes committed in the district has decreased by more than 1,000.

The increase in court cases is due to a number of factors, including the increase in the number of cases brought before the court by the police and the increase in the number of cases brought before the court by the public.

GIRLS. Didn't you know it? Courting time comes in earnest. The pretty hat, the chic coat, the shapely legs have their place, but the plump, pretty bust, as the poet tells, is the natural one she who makes "the real wife" and mother, is a situation "the genuine man" who wants a woman to love, pet and adore through life. Pads, plump and striding like "horse cars," are things plain. Conway's Bandoleros make women plump, powerful, voluptuous and handsome. $10.00 if we enlarge your breasts 4 to 10 inches by legal means.
